Miscegenation Laws

Not only Virginia, but twenty-nine other States of the Union in which miscegenation laws exists, will be affected by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States if the Appomattox County case ever reaches that tribunal. For, although the white-and-negro marriage question in Virginia involves intricacies at this moment which do not apply to the problem in most of the other States in which miscegenation is forbidden, the rundamental point on which the Appomattox County case must turn the other states.

Briefly, the Appomattox case grows out of the marriage of a white man to a woman who was borne at a time when the law of Virginia prescribed that one-fourth Negro blood constituted a Negro, but who was married at a time when the law of Virginia prescribed that one-sixteenth Negro blood constituted a Negro. The Virginia racial integrity act of 1924 does not apply in the consideration of this case directly, since it had not been enacted at the time of the marriage, but the whole question of laws prohibiting miscegenation—including this State's racial integrity law of 1924—hangs on the outcome of this case. It is not to be believed that the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia on the ground that the General Assembly changed the status of the woman between the time she was born and the time she was married. If that assumption is justified, the only ground of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States must be that all miscegenation laws are invalid It is the decision of that question that is fraught with so much weighty importance to the thirty States of the Union which have enacted miscegenation laws.

As to the necessity for such laws, it is necessary to recall only a recent abhorrent case—that of Kip Rhinelander. From all reports, the Rhinelander person was entitled to no consideration whatever. But suppose he had been a person of consideration, and suppose he had been wholly ignorant of the ancestry of the woman he married. Under the laws of State of New York, he could have obtained no relief for the reason that there are no laws against miscegenation of the statute books of New York. In so far as the woman's ancestry was concerned, he was no more entitled to annulment than if had married a white woman in ignorance of the fact that French or German or Austrian or Spanish blood flowed through her veins.

As to the validity of such laws, it should be realized that no discrimination against the Negro is worked: it is as unlawful for a Negro to marry a white person as it is for a white person to marry a Negro. Moreover, the rights secured to the colored people by the Constitution of the United States are those, and only those, which grow out of their status as citizens and as to which there may be no discrimination. And that full rights of citizenship do not carry with them full and unrestricted right of intermarriage is clearly manifested by the validity of the laws prohibiting intermarriage between persons within the forbidden degree of consanguinity.

Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals upheld the decree of the Circuit Court of Appomattox County annulling a marriage between a white man and a woman of more than one-sixteenth Negro blood. If the case ever reaches the Supreme Court of the United States, that tribunal will, in all probability, take the same view both of conditions and of the law as has been taken by the courts of Virginia.

For Governor

Junius Edger West was born in Sussex County in 1866, in many ways the most trying period in the history of Virginia. Coming upon the stage when Virginia's resources were at their lowest ebb, the war having wiped out the fortunes, shattered the hopes and changed the destinies of most of her people, his struggles were not unlike other youths of the people, testing both his courage and his industry. He was educated in the public schools of his county, Suffolk Collegiate Institute and the University of North Carolina. Later he studied for the law at Washington and Lee University of Virginia but circumstances prevented his completing the course.

He then decided upon a business career, and coming to Suffolk, engaged in the insurance business in which he has been notably successful. He married Miss Ollie Beale, of Suffolk, to which union one child, Margaret, was born.

His brothers are R. T. West, Jesse F. West, member of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia, and John W. West, of Waverly, Va., and Caleb D West of Newport News, Va. He comes from sturdy, pioneer ancestry which transmitted much of its sterling worth to the present generation.

One of the most outstanding services this citizen of Suffolk has rendered his state was in his leadership of the fight which prevented the breaking of the Bayler Survey. This battle is one of the most memorable in the political annals of Virginia, but it saved the cyster industry for the people. He was patron of the first seed bill to become a law in this state; co-patron of special appropriation for graded schools and author of the special appropriation to the one and two room schools.

He was also patron of the West Fee Bill which has saved the taxpayers over $1,000,000.00, and the West Health Bill or Health Law, two measures that rank high among the legislative acts of the best days of Virginia. He was a patron of the state purchasing act, which has also saved the taxpayers a large sum. He was staunch in his opposition to a tonnage tax on coal and other restrictive legislation.

As an exponent on tax reform, Mr. West has stood as one of its foremost champions throughout his public career and due to its importance he is making a study of present conditions in order to suggest still further improvements from time to time. He was the leading patron of the bill limiting the time for the collection of back taxes, leading the fight for lower taxes on bank stock and on capital in business so as to give an impotus to industrial growth in Virginia. In 1921 his platform for the office for Lieutenant Governor declared for a fifty cent tax rate on bonds and notes, and the first general assembly under Governor Trinkle adopted a fifty-five cent rate, blazing the way for important tax reform in this state.

In 1625 he wrote an interesting and comprehensive history of tax reform from 1910 to 1925, inclusive, which received favorable commeet from the press. In 1922 he was the first public man in Virginia to declare against the calling of a Constitutional Convention which had been submitted to the people by an over whelming majority in both branches of the legislature. In 1927 he took a strong position against the elective franchise and school fund apportionment sections of the new or amended Constitution as proposed by the Prentis Commission, winning his fight before the extra session of the general assembly.

He will go before the Democratic voters in the campaign of 1929 with a brilliant record that has been tried and tested by time. The legislation that he has sponsored has been general rather than sectional, as beneficial to the people of the far-flung Blue Ridge, Valley, Piedmont and Southwest as to his own beloved Tidewater. He stands for the greater development of Hamddon Roads and the Maritime interests of his state, not because they are at the front door but because they belong to all Virginia assets that will enrich and prosper the humblest as well as the riches dweller in the commonwealth. He stands for the Virginia of to-day and tomorrow, for her intellectual, moral, spiritual and industrial development. A man of highest and cleanest personal character, endowed with noble impulses, grounded in the democracy for which Jefferson strove, fearless in the discharge of his duty, unspoiled by private and public success, with a heart beating in unison with those who are looking forward, and in the primo of life and physical and mortal vigor, in Junius Edgar West the people of Virginia have a man qualified to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors from Yeardley to Byrd. Suffolk News-Herald.

Grading Tobacco

Establishment of a tobacco inspection and grading service on one of the Virginia tobacco markets this fall is being planned by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, and the Virginia Division of Markets. It is an entirely new venture in which the two agencies will endeavor to produce the full co-operation of all tobacco interests. Tobacco farmers, dealers, warehousemen. and manufacturers, will be asked to cooperate in making the experiment a success.

The experiment will be tried in only one of the Virginia fire-cureed tobacco markets during the coming season, the selection of the particular market depending upon the size of the market, the local demand for the service, and the extent of the cooperation offered by warehousemen, buyers, and growers. A competent tobacco man experienced in buying and grading the particular type of tobacco sold on the market will be employed to inspect and grade tobacco at the auction warehouse upon request of producers.

The official grader will be selected by the State and Federal Governments jointly, and he will be directly responsible to them, so that he will be an impartial judge who will not discriminate in favor of any individual farmer, warehouseman, or buyer. Tobacco will be graded only for farmers who desire the service of an official grader, and a small fee will be charged for grading, which fee will be collected by the warehouseman and paid over to the State or Federal authorities to help defray the expenses of the service.

The amount of the fee will be based upon the size of each lot of tobacco graded, at the rate of two cents per pounds. The rate of fee may be changed from time to time as circumstances make it expedient, but in no case will a fee greater than that estimated to defray the actual expenses of the service be charged. The overhead expenses will be borne directly by the departments.

Farmers who desire their tobacco graded will advise the warehouseman upon delivery of the tobacco at the market. If a farmer desires to have only a portion of his delivery graded, he can designate the particular lots or basket to be graded. No farmer will be required to have any of his tobacco graded before it is sold on the market, but the service will be given, so far as it is possible, to all farmers who request it.

After the tobacco has been weighed and labeled in the customary manner, the official grader will carefully inspect each lot to be graded and determino its correct grade. The official grader will then note the correct grade on each lot so that this information will be accessible to farmers and buyers. This will be done in the manner prescribed by the Government and only the standard grades established by the United States Department of Agriculture will be used. As each lot that has been graded is sold, the auctioneer will announce to all parties concerned the standard grade of the tobacco and then proceed with the sale in the customary manner.

After the auction the farmer can compare the prices that he is offered with those of other lots of corresponding grades found on the floor, as well as the average prices by grades for the previous day's sale. If he is not satisfied with the prices offered, the fact that he has had his tobacco graded will not interfere with his right to reject any lot and offer it again for sale or remove it from the floor.

The standard grade assigned to any lot of tobacco will not interfere with any private grade that a buyer may use after he has purchased the lot, but the buyers will be asked to cooperate in upholding a fair and uniform market for all tobacco of like quality, color, and length.

The principal duty of the official grader will be to grade the tobacco offered on the market at the request of the farmers, but he will be expected to use any of his spare time in instructing farmers in assorting and preparing their tobacco for market and explaining to them the standard grades. There will be no charge for this service.

In case a lot of tobacco is found to be badly mixed, so that, in the opinion of the grader, it will be to the farmer's advantage to have it reassorted, the official grader will advise the farmer to that effect, if he is present, and instruct him as to how it should be assorted.

The principal objects to be accomplished are summarized by the bureau as follows:

1. To bring about a more uniform market for tobacco of like quality, color and length.

2. To encourage farmers in the production of better quality tobacco.

3. To give the farmer a more definite basis for sorting his tobacco.

4. To demonstrate to farmers to become familiar with the grades that are more in demand so that they can intelligently plan to produce tobacco that will meet market requirements.

6. To bring about a closer cooperation and better understanding between the producers, warehousemen, and buyers, for the purpose of enabling the American producers and dealers to better compete with the increasing competition of foreign-grown tobacco.

7. To enable buyers and manufacturers to secure a more uniform packing of tobacco as a result of more careful and intelligent assorting by farmers.

8. To give to tee buyers and the farmers the benefit of the impartial judgment of an experienced tobacco man who has carefully inspected the tobacco without binding or obligating either party to accept the findings of the official grader.

9. To make available to farmers definite and practical information on current prices by grades, based upon the actual sales of tobacco.

10. To give to the tobacco trade generally a common language which will facilitate the transaction of business through a general knowledge of the standard grades for tobacco.

Criticisms and suggestions regarding the foregoing tentative plan are solicited from tobacco farmers, dealers, warehousemen, manufacturers, and others interested. All communications should be addressed to either the Virginia Division of Markets, Richmond, Va., or the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C. Those interested in having this service installed at a particular market should lose no time in making their wishes known. A large number of farmers, as well as some warehousemen have already expressed their desire for the service. The market will be definitely decided upon at an early date.

PROPERLY FED COWS PRODUCE MORE MILK

A properly fed cow giving her maximum amount of milk will return about 48% of the feed she eats in milk. The remaining 52% is used in maintaining her body.

The right quality and quantity of the various food elements as protein, carbohydrates and fat are necessary if we wish to get maximum milk production from our cows.

The cow has no part in the composition of her milk. If she is underfed in any of the different food elements the milk pail will show the loss.

GLOBE MILK PRODUCER is a thoroughly mixed, carefully balanced, palatable carrier of protein and minerals for supplementing your home grown grains.
